Warren Report 'a lie'

It must be pretty dismal for you to keep writing these pro-Warren Report editorials ("Telling truth about JFK," May 24) only to find out that over 80 percent of Americans still don't believe you.

You are surprised that the military officers who performed the autopsy on John Kennedy 29 years ago still aren't believed. You attack the integrity of Oliver Stone for his "conspiracy-peddling," and call honest researchers who have risked their reputations and lives "purveyors of conspiratorial trash." Those of us who take the time to read and research the assassination are "gullible" for not believing you.

You know why we don't believe you? The Warren Report is a lie. You can dress up a pig, but it's still going to oink.

I was deeply disappointed in your editorial. You praise the Journal of the American Medical Association for "printing convincing interviews" with two Navy doctors who reaffirm their initial 1963 conclusion that John Kennedy was shot from behind by a solo assassin. Your praise, however, seems aimed less at the merits than at the possibility that this theory, repackaged in the respectable white coat of the AMA, will show the "torrent" of opposing views.

You use the same ill-fitting logic, defensive posturing and ugly name-calling that has been characteristic of the government's official response to inquiries into Kennedy's death. The primary examples of "fanciful speculation" and "paranoia" have been exhibited by those who have been so "gullible" as to believe that the American people aren't ready for the truth about JFK. The truth is long overdue.
